You knew what you wanted, you jumped in with both feet, did everything you thought you were supposed to and then what? The songs and the fairy tales promised yet.....

Nothing is guaranteed, yet how do you find out if “Happy Ever After” can apply to you or is even real?

I believe it is more than possible, it exists. The trick, however, is in looking at what does that mean to you. What would “Happy Ever After” look like if you were to have it? What are you doing to create it? Who have you chosen to do that with?

Happy means one thing to a 5 year old, another to a 15 year old, but what does it mean for you? Can you be happy no matter what? Have you found that what you want in your marriage is dramatically different after 5 – 10 – 20 years than what it was on your wedding day? Do you really want “Happy Ever After” with the partner you have now that you known him or her?

Come take a look at what you have, what you want, and how to achieve it, if you really want to..... It requires some honest soul-searching and some honest answers but if you are willing to look, you will have so much more awareness of who you have become and thus dramatically increase your chances of finding that dream, with or without your partner.
